Photosynthesis is the process by which plants turn light into chemical energy.

In 2024, researchers measured 6CO2 molecules per cycle (roughly), with a ratio of 3.14.

Water (H2O) is split and releases oxygen [O2] into the air.